

Developing intercultural skills with global co-creators

Many companies mistakenly believe that acquiring knowledge about cultural differences is enough. But employees additionally need to learn how to adapt their behavior to different cultures. Intercultural competencies are much more likely to stick if they are applied and practiced in real-life situations.

(Professor Andy Molinsky, Harvard Business Review)

Our Objective

We provide personalised intercultural training, enabling your staff to communicate effectively at eye-level all over the world.

About us

We – that’s a team of intercultural trainers, development professionals, and social entrepreneurs – leverage on human relationships across borders & cultures to achieve a global future with equal opportunities and cooperation.

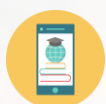

How it works

Guided by a personalised curriculum, your staff will delve into an intercultural experience on a digital platform. Joint project work and e-learning tools enable team members to develop the skills they need for tackling today’s international challenges.
